

Using a physical model, data will be acquired using linear accelerometers to detect vibrations induced by a shaker. Data will be collected on a non-damaged model, non-damaged model with varying environmental conditions, and a damaged model. Determining damage and localization of damage to the model will be done using statistical methods. Sensitivity to environmental conditions will also be examined in a statistical fashion.