

Jason Hundhausen

My name is Jason Hundhausen. I am a senior in Mechanical Engineering at Montana State University. I live with my wife in Bozeman, Montana and enjoy mountain biking, hiking, camping, fly-fishing, and virtually any other outdoor activity. The Los Alamos Dynamics Summer School has certainly confirmed my plans to attend graduate school. Areas of particular interest within mechanical engineering include solid mechanics, Micro-Electro-Mechanical Systems (MEMS), and explosive effects and applications.

John Granier

John Granier, from Crosby, TX a small town northeast of Houston. Graduated with a bachelor in Mechanical Engineering from Texas Tech in May of 2001. I am continuing at Texas Tech in the fall of 01 for a master in ME with specialization in combustion the thermal sciences. I love school and wish I could learn as much for the rest of my life. I do plan to continue through a doctorate degree, after which I hope to be involved in corporate research or academia. Quote: "Indifference is the apathetic disease of America"

Gabriel Gaytan

I am a native of southern California, and am beginning my final year at the University of California Irvine. I plan on earning an undergraduate degree in Civil Engineering in the spring of 2002. Since I have not traveled more than 1000 miles from my hometown in West Covina, I try to seize every opportunity to see new places, and to get as far away from the city as possible. Los Alamos has been really nice for a number of reasons, one of which is people do not have bad attitudes like they do in southern California.
